Information Sheet and Schedule

One person cannot lead the process of dramatically improving learning and teaching in any school. The type of deep, sustainable change demanded by the Turning Points model requires many leaders throughout a school community – teachers, team leaders, in-house facilitators, administrators, and Turning Points coaches. Principals and teachers are strongly urged to come together.

The Turning Points National Institute is designed to help new and returning Turning Points educators and coaches develop the capacity to lead the work. The Institute will focus on helping participants better understand their particular roles and acquire the tools and strategies needed to facilitate significant improvements in the teaching, learning, culture, and leadership of their schools. The Institute will deepen your understanding of the Turning Points practices and further develop facilitation and coaching skills.
